"HELP THOU MINE UNBELIEF." Because in some vague way my soul doth know That over us all, who strut our little way And build frail structures time shall overthrow, There sits the one whom rolling orbs obey; Because e'en through my blindness some bright ray At times has pierced to lighten unfaith's grief, I dare to lift my sightless eyes and say: "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief."

This body's clay. What then? It is the wine Within, and not the flask, that counteth still, And somewhat in this earthly clay of mine Doth dream as clay ne'er did, nor ever will. Who is the potter that doth give his ware These dreams that pass beyond time's utmost reef, Bright, deathless dreams that on and outward fare?— "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief."

Dim creeds perplex, and yet his truth doth stand; The warring sects war on, nor ever cease, Their petty prattle heard on every hand, Till through the discords all doth strike his peace; And, "Here is truth," one clamors—blind as I— "You'll find it bound in this good churchman's sheaf!" Father of all, heed thou my broken cry: "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief."

—A. J. Waterhouse.
Maid Marian of the days of Robin Hood and his Merry Men never watched the flight of an arrow with more delight than the fair archers of the Claremont Country Club in Oakland. The good old sport of bow and shaft has had a revival at the club in the Piedmont hills. Twenty years ago some of the best archers in the country hailed from across the bay. But the advent of tennis and golf drove the sport into the background and not until lately has it again made its appearance.

The sport has so far advanced this summer that it has been decided to hold a tournament which will take up several Saturdays, a very handsome silver trophy going to the winner. The magic words "under the greenwood tree" come from the story of Robin Hood. It was when Robin Hood first took to the woods that one day he met Maid Marian. It was she who took him to the secluded spot which afterward was the retreat from which it was impossible to dislodge him. Robin Hood and his men took an oath on the bow of the chief to do no harm to anyone within the sacred precincts of the greenwood tree which was known as Greenwood Glen. No one was ever able to find the glen although many were guests of the merry men. They were always taken to the spot blindfolded. It is the intention of the officers of the Claremont Club to set aside one of the glens to be known as Greenwood Glen. There the archery matches will take place. Green trailing vines will be planted at the foot of one of the trees and under it all the meetings of the archery club will be held.

Method used in the reception, acknowledgment, and final disposition of wedding gifts is the only way to do justice to the donors of them and to your own convenience. Unless system is thus employed there is general confusion, and the note of thanks, which does not instantly show that each gift is strictly identified with the giver, loses that tone of special importance of her gift and robs you of a certain happiness that should go with the receipt of each gift.

Cable dispatches have told that in the war with Russia the Japanese surgeons in the naval hospitals saved the lives of all but thirty-two men out of the 682 wounded in battle. Now the surgeon-general of the Japanese navy, Dr. Suzuki, who came to America to deliver an address before the Association of Mrs. Hall Walker she pointed out more than one error and corrected the card herself, turning a certain loss into a handsome gain for the royal sportsman.

On the occasion of Sarah Bernhardt's last visit to this country a well-known critic called on her before she had quite finished luncheon. He found her surrounded by a fringe of Frenchmen of various types, who at frequent intervals carefully introduced interjections to remind her of their presence. She took up the menu and looking down it, said: "Pumpkin pie—what is that?"

One of the tallest of the Frenchmen rose with staid dignity, and shaking a long index finger in rhythm with an admonitory voice, exclaimed: "For Heaven's sake, be careful, madam. It's the national cake." But Sarah took it.

We all like good clothes and the feeling of being well dressed. It is not entirely a question of money; it is also a matter of detail and of giving a small portion of our time to keeping our belongings in order. No matter how expensive or well fitting one's dress is, the appearance is spoiled by a soiled stock or piece of lace or a crushed and frayed skirt. Just stop and think what a saving of time and money the short skirt is to a woman, especially the busy woman. No skirt brags need renewal, no frayed edges give her an untidy appearance.

Take a look at your everyday skirt and think what an improvement a good pressing would be to it. This can be done very easily at home and should be done every week or two. Place your skirt on a covered ironing board and have handy two hot irons rather heavy in weight. Now cover the portions to be pressed with a thoroughly wet piece of unbleached muslin folded double, and when pressing don't move the iron too quickly over it, but press until the material stops steaming.

Should there remain dulled or glazed spots, sponge lightly and press again. Thomas Lawson's mother displayed a wonderful intuitive perception at a critical point in his life, though apparently it led in a different direction in deciding his education. His father was a carpenter, and when he was 12 years old he ran away from school at Cambridgeport and walked into State street, Boston, where he secured a job as office boy. The next day his mother sent him back to school. He ran away again, coming back to his place in the street. His mother sent him back to school again, but after having a talk with a member of the firm, she decided to let him have his try at business on condition that he would study nights, which she helped in every way in her power.

If your door or bureau drawer sticks in damp weather simply moisten a cake of laundry soap and rub over the parts of wood that stick. This is a particularly good thing to know when one has new furniture that bothers, or is moving into a new house where the doors scrape at the top.

GAS RANGE COOKING....

How to be Economical

"Be thoughtful. There are so many little ways of saving gas, and just as many ways to waste it. Follow these three simple rules, which cover almost the entire question of economy:

1. Never light the gas until everything is ready.
2. Never use a stronger flame than is necessary.
3. Turn out the gas the instant cooking is finished.
